

Creating Space & Adding Light to Small Urban Spaces

When our client's architect, Mark Sangiolo of Sangiolo Associates Architects, contacted Renaissance Conservatories, he had but one goal in mind; enclosing an alleyway connecting his client's urban townhome to the adjacent one. In doing this, he would effectively add 80 square feet to the home's kitchen, and bring an abundant amount of Natural light into the North elevation of the home.

Located on Kingman Place Northeast, a historic district of Washington D.C., and only a few blocks from the White House, the home was undergoing a complete renovation from top to bottom. Our design team worked on bringing Mark's vision to reality.

Project components included:

- Full-view Glass Door with Solid Brass Truth Classic Hardware.
- Motorized operating Awning Vent.
- Low-pitch Glass Roof Skylight with included wire chases.
- Exterior Copper Flashings
- Installation by Renaissance Conservatories Installation Team.
